Clarkson: Robert Crown's Sex Ed in the Digital Age an informative, affirming talk for parents

Our Community Presentation, Raising Healthy Teens was featured in The Doings on April 11. Read the article:

"I have a seventh-grader, and I hear that seventh-graders are having sex," answered one parent to the question: "Why are you here?"

The parent added, "I don't know what she knows and what she doesn't know."

Lance Williams, a Robert Crown Centers for Health Education senior health educator, was the one who asked "Why are you here?" at the Raising Healthy Teens in a Digital Age - Talking about Sex talk held on Tuesday. It attracted a lively and concerned crowd of parents who were quite willing to share their own experiences and concerns.

"I'm technologically ignorant," another parent answered. "I don't know how to ask thoughtful or pointed questions."

Teen Drug Abuse: 14 Mistakes Parents Make

From CBSNEWS.com, take a look at some of the mis-steps that parents make when it comes to teen drug use.

This reinforces that kids do care (whether they tell us so or not) about what we, as parents, say and do. For more information and suggestions about talking to your kids about sex and drugs, visit our Parent Resources page.

Meet Our Board

Brian Hammersley - Board Chair

After graduating from Indiana University in 2002, Brian fulfilled his lifelong dream of becoming a Financial Advisor. He was mentored by his grandfather and learned the importance of integrity, honesty, and discipline while working with local families and businesses. His passion for working with clients to help them with financial stewardship, generational wealth management, and business services continues to grow. Brian is married to his wife, Kirsty and they have three sons, Thatcher, Beckett & Jack and a daughter, Georgia. He spends his time enjoying the outdoors with the family, playing platform tennis, and golfing. Brian was a participant in Robert Crown Center programs as a child and is honored to help with the mission of leading, educating, and motivating kids towards healthy, happy, and safe lives.
