Clarkson: Robert Crown's Sex Ed in the Digital Age an informative, affirming talk for parents

Our Community Presentation, Raising Healthy Teens was featured in The Doings on April 11. Read the article:

"I have a seventh-grader, and I hear that seventh-graders are having sex," answered one parent to the question: "Why are you here?"

The parent added, "I don't know what she knows and what she doesn't know."

Lance Williams, a Robert Crown Centers for Health Education senior health educator, was the one who asked "Why are you here?" at the Raising Healthy Teens in a Digital Age - Talking about Sex talk held on Tuesday. It attracted a lively and concerned crowd of parents who were quite willing to share their own experiences and concerns.

"I'm technologically ignorant," another parent answered. "I don't know how to ask thoughtful or pointed questions."

Want to be part of the transformation? We have an exciting and unique offer.

We're currently updating our Sex Education programs and looking for a limited number of schools to work with us in piloting them in the fall. Piloting involves implementing the new program (pre-visit work, in-school program, post-visit work) and providing feedback to improve the program for the roll-out next school year. If you're interested, please email us using the link below:
