

Learn More About the Robert Crown Center for Health Education >

In the News

CNN:
A teacher in California is explaining the concept of consent to her third-graders with a simple chart

With the recent news about the #MeToo movement and sexual misconduct allegations against Justice Brett Kavanaugh, the term "consent" has become part of the national dialogue.

It also can be confusing. So one California teacher, worried that her students may not understand the concept, created a simple chart to explain it.

Liz Kleinrock, a third-grade teacher at Citizens of the World Charter School in Los Angeles, calls her explainer "All About Consent."

READ MORE >

From the Experts

Teach Mental Health Now for Skills Later by Liz Carter

In a recent article from NBC News, Sarah DiGiulo talks about how a new law in the state of New York is requiring mental health to be taught in health education classes. While there are currently some schools that have already been teaching about mental health, it hasn't been mandated. Reaching out for help regarding issues with mental health is often something that is stigmatized as making a person "weak" or "unable to handle things on their own". This stigma is often passed on from parents to their children unknowingly, making children think that they are weak for not being able to handle everyday stress as well as some others may be able to

READ MORE >

Upcoming Presentation

Mark Your Calendar:
Vaping - October 23 - 7pm

Due to popular demand we will be hosting another presentation on vaping. As you've seen in the news recently, vaping's popularity with young people continues to grow. This community presentation will outline the facts, as we know them, about vaping.

Due to demand, RSVP is required for this event.

LEARN MORE >

Why is health education important?

How do we expect kids to make good decision about sex and drugs if they don't have all the information? One decision can have a dramatic outcome on a student's life. Our goal is to provide Health Education for All. Take a look at our digital brochure to see the facts below:

LEARN MORE >

In the News

National Institute on Drug Abuse:
This is NIDA: Opioids

A short video on opioids. Spend 1 minute to understand the scope of the opioid crisis:

Meet Our Board

Ed McCarthy

Ed McCarthy is a real estate partner in The McCarthy Group for Berkshire Hathaway Home Services, Koenig-Rubloff. Prior to starting the residential real estate group with his wife Nellie, Ed worked with Jones Lang LaSalle, the second largest commercial real estate services company in the world, and for NAI Hiffman on office brokerage and investment sales teams. Ed has a Bachelor of Science Degree from Loyola University and an MBA from DePaul University's Kellstadt Real Estate School. In addition to his work with the Robert Crown Center, Ed sits on the Hinsdale Hospital Foundation Board and on the Board of the Hinsdale Central High School Boosters Club and is a volunteer coach for high school and middle school girls' lacrosse.

Meet the Team

Sangeeta Solshe - Health Educator

Sangeeta earned a doctor's degree from India and received her master's degree in public health from Benedictine University. She resides with her family in Naperville and stays involved in the community. She has taught and conducted health education presentations to students in DuPage County. Additionally, she provided information to individuals and communities to promote, maintain, and improve healthy lifestyles. Some of the issues that she is passionate about raising awareness for are substance abuse, safety, HIV/STIs, nutrition, high blood pressure, smoking, pregnancy, and diabetes. She firmly believes that knowledge and behavior change are key to achieving a healthy community.

Robert Crown Center for Health Education | 630.325.1900 | info@robertcrown.org | robertcrown.org

STAY CONNECTED:

