"Send Nudes": A New Study Shows How Often Boys Pressure Girls For Explicit Photos

A recent study has shown just how common it is for teen boys to coerce or threaten girls into sending nude pictures: an analysis of 500 accounts from 12- to 18-year-old girls about negative experiences sexting found that two-thirds of them had been asked to provide explicit images - and that the requests often progressed from promises of affection to "anger displays, harassment and threats." In an article about the study for The New York Times, psychologist Lisa Damour writes, "Teenagers are drafted into a sexual culture that rests on a harmful premise: on the heterosexual field, boys typically play offense and girls play defense... Most schools and many parents already tell teenagers not to send sexualized selfies. But why don't we also tell adolescents to stop asking for nude photos from one another?"

Vaping-The 21st Century's Smoking by Payton Stifflear

There are only a few things I can still remember from my elementary school and middle school curriculums, as details of the Oregon Trail, rules of geometry, and the organs' functions have slipped my mind with the beginning of every new school year. Although a few things have been hammered into my mind year after year, and among square roots, the mitochondria's function, and the oxford comma, the dangers of smoking occupy a permanent place in my mind. Despite my peers and I being told, year after year, of the manipulation of cigarette companies and death sentence that comes with it, I find myself in the midst of a revival of smoking, with the rise of vaping.

Relationship Education: Necessary in a Murky World
by Edith Lule

February is Teen Dating Violence Awareness and Prevention Month. According to BreaktheCycle.org, one in three high school students will experience physical or sexual violence, or both, by someone they are dating. It's hard to imagine that this could be the reality for some teenagers, but statistics like this highlight the need to educate young people on healthy relationships - what does it mean to be in a healthy relationship and maybe more importantly, what does it mean to be in an unhealthy relationship?

Partnership for Drug-Free Kids: Odds of Dying From Opioid Overdose Now Greater Than Vehicle Crash Death

Americans are more likely to die of an accidental opioid overdose than a motor vehicle crash for the first time in U.S. history, according to the National Safety Council (NSC).

In a new analysis, the NSC found the odds of dying accidentally from an opioid overdose have increased to one in 96, compared with one in 103 for a motor vehicle crash, NPR reports.

"We've made significant strides in overall longevity in the United States, but we are dying from things typically called accidents at rates we haven't seen in half a century," Ken Kolosh, manager of statistics at NSC, said in a news release. "We cannot be complacent about 466 lives lost every day. This new analysis reinforces that we must consistently prioritize safety at work, at home and on the road to prevent these dire outcomes."
